WELFARE TEAMS ARE CONFIDENT AS DRIVE OPENS

Workers Plunge Into Actual Task of Raising Funds Today

FIRST REPORTS
READY TONIGHT

Leaders, Optimistic, See
Improved Business
Conditions

The confidence which has led Community Chest workers to an unbroken succession of victories in preceding years, last night imbued the 100 or more executives, team captains and team members of the 1933 campaign as they met at the Memorial building, applied the final organization touches and prepared for the two-day drive for a fund of $12,900.

At Work Today

And today Earl S. Kerr, general chairman; F. Troy Cope, head of the executive committee; Clifton Reeves, chairman of the committee on arrangements; L. P. Metzger, the campaign manager; the team captains and the team members have rolled up their sleeves and were hard at the task of providing funds whereby the worthy participating institutions may continue to operate—a task in which the general public is cooperating to the fullest extent.

The workers are scheduled to make their first reports at a meeting at 6:30 tonight at the Elks club. Final reports will be turned in at Friday evening's gathering at the same place.

While cognizance was given the conditions of today, a spirit of optimism, nevertheless, pervaded last night's assembly—a feeling that business is definitely on the upward trend; that the 1933 Community Chest will succeed; and, in fact, a feeling that it will be entirely safe to mortgage the future, if necessary, to make certain that the chest does not fail.

Chairman Kerr presided. Instructions were given by Atty. L. P. Metzger, who said that the Community Chest is definitely improving, manufacturing is better, and production generally is increasing.

R. W. Hawley—"Mr. Reeves' business card revealed a series of bumps up until recently when it took a sudden and very straight line upward. This campaign will be like that. The drive will proceed on a straight line to its goal. There will be no bumps or detours."

Disarmament Fate Resting in Hands Of U.S., Germany

Conference Delegates Believe Results Are
Up to Roosevelt and Hitler; Messages
Have "Cleared the Air"

BY JOSEPH E. SHARKEY,
Associated Press Staff
Correspondent

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 18.—The rapid sequence of events in the last few days has largely placed the destiny of the disarmament conference in the hands of President Roosevelt and Chancellor Hitler, in the view of many conference delegates.

The influence of these two men, it was said today, constitutes a powerful factor in directing the course of the conference which awaits concrete initiatives on their part.

Clear the Air
The Roosevelt message and the Hitler answer generally were regarded as clearing the air and producing a new and more hopeful atmosphere.

Delegates indicated eagerness to know how far America was disposed to go in what Geneva regards as completing the machinery of peace. Particularly, they desired to know whether the Washington government was disposed to accept in principle such things as:

1. Rigid international control of armaments.
2. Participation in a world pact of non-resort to force.
3. Helping the league in determining an aggressor.
4. Refraining from helping an aggressor once this determination has been effected.
5. Participation in any arms embargo.
6. Abandonment of the rights of neutrality in the event of an outbreak of war.

Can Adopt An Attitude
Geneva recognized that the United States, like England, under its political system cannot give blanket promises in advance but must adopt an attitude when a particular world disturbance arises.

But of the opinion was expressed by conference delegates that an announced disposition to boycott a breaker of the peace would prove salutary in inducing armistice nations to reduce their arms.

Geneva found hope in Hitler's declaration that Germany was ready to accept new obligations in a security pact provided that pact was international in scope.

This was widely interpreted here as meaning that Germany desires American participation in measures to outlaw war.

Saturday, May 27, Date Finally Set For County Meet

Wilbur J. Springer, high school principal today announced that the annual Columbiana county track and field meet will be held Saturday afternoon, May 27, at Reilly stadium.

The meet was originally scheduled May 6, but was postponed because of rain. A succession of obstacles arose following the postponement to make the setting of a date difficult. After a conference with President Palmer of the county association, the 27th was selected as the date. In the meantime, however, schools will have closed at Lisbon and Leetonia, but it is hoped by association officials that track teams of these two schools can be kept together in order to round out the entry list.

A social committee was appointed to serve for four months. It is comprised of Mrs. P. E. Bates, Miss Barnes, Mrs. Elijah Gray, Mrs. Lewis Newhouse, Mrs. Orval Bates and Mrs. Edward Stewart.

TUESDAY LIMIT ON DELINQUENT WATER CHARGES

Supply to Be Turned Off
If Bills Aren't Paid,
Director Warns

FUNDS NEEDED TO RUN DEPARTMENT

1,200 Consumers now Owe
Six Months or More,
Records Show

Forced to take immediate action to raise funds to meet operating expenses and, he declared, to avert the closing of the water works department, Service Director Clyde R. Reich announced today that water at homes of all delinquent customers will be turned off after next Tuesday, May 23.

Less than $500 is now deposited to the credit of the water works, Reich announced, while delinquent bills for the current year alone have mounted to approximately $15,000. Out of the department's 3,200 customers, approximately 1,800 are delinquent, he said.

Two Plans Open

"The state gives me two methods in which to avert closing down the water works plant when funds are lacking to meet operating expenses," the service director reported.

"One way is through the increase of water rates, imposing a hardship on the minority who pay regularly, and the other is through the collection of delinquent bills."

Adding that he will not increase the rates, Reich explained that his only recourse is through some action to force the payment of the delinquent bills. And, he stated, if sufficient funds are not forthcoming through the collections, the next step will be either the closing down of the plant or a sharp increase in rates.

Water bills in January totaled approximately $14,000 while collections amounted to less than $8,000. In April, bills were increased to $15,000 while collections took a drop and amounted to about $7,000, Reich said.

Owe 6 Months or More

Of the 1,800 consumers owing bills to the municipal department, about 1,200 are delinquent for a six-month or longer period. It is towards these latter that Reich is aiming his money-collection drive, the service director explaining that those who owe for only the last quarter while their payments will be more than welcomed, will not be in danger of having water turned off.

"We are only too glad," Reich explained, "to give every consumer a chance to pay off his bill. The time has come, however, when the department's future is endangered. Debts are increasing rapidly and no funds are on hand for the payment of operating expenses."

Payments of the bills may be made on the installment plan, Reich added, and in order for any delinquent to avoid having his water turned off, he must appear at the water works office and make a payment before next Tuesday. No exceptions will be made to this order, he said.

Tetlow Calls on Roosevelt As Ohio's Mine Truce Ends

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, May 18.—Negotiations looking for permanent solution of the bituminous coal mining problem in Ohio had ended in failure today with leaders of the workers appealing to President Roosevelt for federal intervention.

After the last of a series of conferences between the miners and operators yesterday—the expiration date of a temporary wage scale—Percy Tetlow, acting district head of the United Mine Workers, announced no agreement had been reached and that he had telegraphed the president urging immediate steps to stabilize the state's coal industry.

Principals Are Silent
Meanwhile, neither Gov. White, who arranged the conferences, nor the operators made any statement, although the owners previously had intimated they would close their workings unless the miners accepted a reduced wage.

The temporary scale—38 cents a ton for loaders and $3.28 a day for laborers—was put in force a year ago when the operators and miners of the Hooking and Pomeroy fields accepted a ten-point "peace plan" offered by Gov. White to settle a seven months' strike.

As the end of the truce approached, Gov. White induced the two groups to meet in joint conference, suggesting that they agree upon a flexible wage based on prices and market conditions. The miners, however, held out for continuance of the present scale. The operators claimed downward revisions were necessary to meet competition.

Hundreds Are Idle
Thus, while a few miners were retained on maintenance jobs for the present scale, the operators claimed downward revisions were necessary to meet competition.

GROUP TO VISIT SALEM COMPANY PLANT SATURDAY

LLOYD JONES WILL DESCRIBE PRODUCT

Salem Residents Invited
To Visit Factory On Friday Afternoon

Approximately 350 steel mill engineers from many sections of the United States will gather in Salem Saturday for an inspection of the new four-high cold-rolling mill, the largest of its kind in the world, manufactured by the E. W. Bliss company here.

The mill and its construction features are reported by Lloyd Jones, general manager of the Bliss, to have attracted interest of steel engineers throughout the industrial world. It will be exhibited to residents of Salem and vicinity when the plant observes "open house" Friday afternoon.

Electrical Experts Here

The inspection trip of the engineers is being made under the auspices of the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers, a national organization. Representatives of the organization from Pittsburgh, Pa., Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia, Birmingham, Ala., and other cities of the country will attend, Jones reported.

The mill will be examined and inspected by the visiting engineers at 10:30 a. m. while at noon luncheon will be served at the Elks club, East State st. A technical session, at which General Manager Jones will present a paper, "Cold Rolling Process," describing the new mill, will be held at the high school auditorium at 1:30 p. m.

Following the presentation of Jones' paper, discussion will be held of the mill and its new features by prominent design, operating and maintenance engineers.

The technical session, to which Salem residents are invited, will in turn be followed by a meeting of the association's national board of directors, visiting the industrial world in that they demonstrate a new use for steel, Jones announced. The association is now conducting a "new use" campaign to encourage engineers to develop these new uses and thus help the steel industry to get employees back to work, increase their earning power and, directly or indirectly, benefit almost every person in the country.

Housings of Steel Plates
The Bliss mill will produce sheets which will finish to a thickness tolerance of 5-10,000 of an inch. Among its new features are the housings, made of steel plates instead of castings. The housings consist of large flat links 31 ft 10 in. long, 10 ft 3 in. wide, and eight inches thick.

Each link weighs 30 tons and four links are required for each housing. Welded steel construction is also used for other accessories.

The mill housings are expected to prove of special significance and interest to the industrial world in that they demonstrate a new use for steel, Jones announced. The association is now conducting a "new use" campaign to encourage engineers to develop these new uses and thus help the steel industry to get employees back to work, increase their earning power and, directly or indirectly, benefit almost every person in the country.

It is estimated that a general adoption of the Bliss type of housing for rolling mill construction will result in annual market of thousands of tons annually of rolled steel shapes and plates for similar purposes.

AN ERROR OF JUDGMENT

It has been evident throughout investigation of the Airship Akron's destruction that an error of judgment on the part of its commander was a contributory cause. It has been equally evident, however, that it was an unavoidable error for which there could be no personal blame. Commander McCord did what he thought was right. Another might have acted differently, but he probably would have been unable to justify a contrary decision under the circumstances.

The situation as it existed on the fateful night might be compared to that of a surface ship in a sea containing submerged icebergs. The peril could not be foreseen. The safety of the ship and its passengers would depend on circumstances of chance and the lack of the man on the bridge. A collision inevitably would be taken as a reflection on his skill, but it is entirely probable that the same policy of action in another case might take the ship through safely.

If Commander McCord had not steered his ship into what appears to have been the center of the storm, there probably would have been no accident. He encountered misfortune which neither he nor anyone else possibly could have foreseen. The probabilities of safety, it appears now, were sacrificed when the ship left its dock, not after it was over the Atlantic ocean. Regardless of the decision reached by the official investigators, regardless of the exceptions made to it by others, public opinion absolves the commander and his aides from personal blame. They were the unfortunate victims of an error of judgment which could not be helped. Such errors are far too common to be condemned in men who paid the supreme price for committing them. Popular opinion is capable of admitting what it believes was the real cause of the Akron disaster without placing blame on any individual.

A DIFFERENT HITLER

Few men have emerged as world figures in so deep a hush of expectancy as awaited Chancellor Hitler's speech to the reichstag on Wednesday. The Nazi leader, constantly in attention for the last two years, had the center of the stage for his first direct address to an international audience fully aware of the importance of the occasion.

It was a Hitler vastly different from their preconceived conceptions who exhibited himself. Here was no demagogue spreading fire and brimstone, but a rational leader making a reasonable statement of Germany's case—a man not essentially different from the heads of other governments. Germany's chancellor undoubtedly gained impressively in prestige as a result.

He said nothing which will irritate more deeply Europe's unsettled condition—a condition which might easily erupt in warfare. Germany will not break the Treaty of Versailles under his direction. Germany is ready to cooperate fully in any attempt to stabilize Europe. Germany stands ready to dissolve its entire military establishment if other nations will do likewise. These are his pledges. Could the ruthless, blind demagogue the world has imagined Hitler to be say of his people, "This generation suffered too much from the insanity of our times to intend to visit the same upon others?"

If it could be realized that Chancellor Hitler comes close to being a true representation of Germany's present mood, it might be easier to refrain from condemning him as an individual. In his address Wednesday, he did not speak for himself but for more than 60,000,000 people crushed under provisions of a treaty which time has proved unwise in many respects. Through him, through the violence and tolerance of some of his policies, Germany has declared that it is not willing to be destroyed. Its pride, its life have been threatened. It denies existence of the right to humiliate it. Adolf Hitler has been constituted by his countrymen as the voice to speak Germany's case to the world. Events of the last month were not produced artificially. However much Hitler's government can be blamed for tolerating them, it cannot be blamed for conditions which made them possible. The chancellor's speech helps people of other nations to comprehend that fundamental fact.

GOOD NEWS FOR EPICURES

Ohioans who like their wheat cakes and sausage will lick their lips over the news that our own state is to have a 10 per cent higher production of maple syrup this year. This means that maple syrup enthusiasts will have somewhat more than 400,000 gallons to pour over their pancakes this year.

And when we find out who is to blame we can almost forget our grudge against the weatherman for the wet spring weather of the last six weeks. The federal crop reporter in Columbus comes forth with the news that the heavy rains have retarded the farmer's usual spring work which probably means that he had more time to devote to his syrup buckets.

Wheat cake devotees who smack their lips over Vermont maple syrup need only take a trip to Chardon, Ohio, to see this unsung industry in full swing. Chardon is the maple syrup center of Ohio and the natives will tell you, and mean it, that theirs is the maple syrup center of the world.

Candy manufacturers who in the past have had to blend their maple flavoring with brown sugar will take heart in the report that 66,000 pounds of maple sugar will be refined from Ohio sap this year. Ohioans should take advantage of this native crop—for maple syrup from Ohio is just as sweet and a lot cheaper (with shipping costs deducted) than from any other state—Toledo Times.

New York

by
Day

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Life among the rich in fashionably suburban Long Island is no longer a hectic swirl of lawn fetes, fox chases, country club teas and dances. This summer it harks of the days when there was leisure in the world, and one could stay a weekend in tale.

There is a pronounced lassitude. The business is to pass the time. When the flux of gaiety so suddenly clogged three years ago many did not seem able to move out of arrested attitudes. They were caught in a dream of despair. But now they are adjusted—if not particularly happy.

Large estates regimented with a half hundred servants have been shucked to two or three. Big houses are shuttered and many owners now occupy the quarters of lodge keepers. Housewives go to the village themselves to market in station wagons. And cook the meals.

Indeed several large estates are without phone connections. Their neighbors appear all around. Many enormous country places have been rented to the bourgeoisie for as little as $250 a month. In such calamities the rich turn to wit, jesters in sack-cloth!

During the tedium of a dull play the other evening I ticked off the bald-heads in the first three rows. Out of 34 men, 19 were noticeably skimp. And one suggested the proverbial billiard ball. To me there's something forceful about a shiny, well-shaped pate. And that reminds me the most becomingly bald person I know is the newspaperman, Karl Bickel and Karl Kitchen.

The most unusual freak of baldness was that of Viscount Cecil as viewed from an upper lodge in a London theater. There was a slight brush of hair at each temple. Then a strand that ran up to the side part and on the other side of the part a perfect split curl. Just about the size of a thumb.

There is little doubt the heaviest head of hair not even excepting the gigantic shock of Sid Grauman, is that of Jay C. Flippen, the monologist. It is a crazy tangle a foot long on top, the despair of barbers, and may be only combed by a special brush of wire. Irides. The locks of Will Hays, Jr., are so thick strands have to be nipped out so they will lay smoothly. The most perfectly trained hair is of the prematurely silvered Brooklyn Brumel, Harry Silvey. If mussed, he merely shakes his head and it falls into a precise middle part, the lucky still.

Thingumabobs: Robert C. Chambers, the author, is an authority on butterflies and Chinese rugs. Lindley Murray, former national tennis champion, now that he is a chemical engineer, is a golf fan. Elsa Maxwell wasn't able to show Hollywood anything new about giving parties. And Coco Chanel is putting over Miss Maxwell's magazine portrait of her. The Prince of Wales's favorite dog is the Cairn. Marlene Dietrich, in spite of masculine garb, knocks folk down with feminine perfume. The lamp shades in Lillian Harvey's dressing room are fringed with ermine tails. Frances Marion, highest paid scenarist, has received $1,500 per broadcast for singing over the radio.

"Going Up!"

This picture might be captioned "Portrait of a Young Lady on the Ladder of Fame." The beautiful one is Miss Elizabeth S. Young, New York society girl, who left the atmosphere of pink teas for the footlights of Broadway. She already has made good on the legitimate stage and is here pictured en route to Hollywood to make her debut in the films.

America's foremost magazine illustrator, Dean Cornwell, returns to the field he quit after doing the vast murals for the Los Angeles public library. This was a labor of love, requiring five years of intense application in London and Los Angeles and sacrificing a $75,000 a year income for one of $10,000. Cornwell, born in Louisville, Ky., does not suggest the painter of popular fancy—a striding Augustus John with smock, long hair, beard and pipe. He is a thin-waisted, blonde young man with a wisp of mustache, suggesting a toll smack off Piccadilly, who smokes cigarettes without inhaling.

I never pass the now gloomy old Hudson theater without recalling a thwarted theatrical career. During a jobless stretch a press agent arranged for me to be a juror in a court scene. In the excitement of the first night I did not notice any fellow jurors until in the box. Then I found myself by unhappy chance next to a man I owed $15. When we filed out for a verdict I kept right on going.

The Stars Say:

For Friday, May 19

The astral operations for this day being fairly negative or with slight influence on the faculties and forces leaves good opportunity for the use of individual initiative and enterprise. This may be best demonstrated in employment, where merit and application may be assured of the recognition of superiors; but even here there may be envy, spite or misrepresentation to dispose of. Those whose birthday it is may expect a year in which they may encounter fair opportunity for expressing their own initiative and originality, especially in employment, where the sanction and preferment of employers are assured.

A child born on this day should be kindly, gracious, socially inclined, but may need some discipline in a tendency to extravagance or distortion of speech. Notable nativity: Samuel G. Blythe, author

Value of Spinal Puncture

Many persons misunderstand what is meant by "spinal puncture" and are alarmed if it is suggested. There is a popular idea that it is dangerous and may have a fatal result. But when the procedure and its purposes are explained, they forget their fears.

Spinal puncture is used to aid in the recognition of certain diseases. In some instances it is curative, bringing relief from pain and suffering.

Running through the inside of the spinal column, the back-bone, is a space called the spinal canal. This carries the great nerve, the spinal cord, which is surrounded by more or less fluid.

Spinal puncture is the tapping of the spinal membranes for the purpose of obtaining some of this fluid. A small amount is withdrawn, examined under a microscope and subjected to various tests.

Painless—Now Examination of the spinal fluid is of great value in diagnosing certain disorders. In doubtful cases it may be the only means of actually determining whether or not a patient is suffering from tumor of the brain, tuberculosis of the brain, various forms of spinal meningitis, fractured skull and other disorders.

Fortunately, it is now possible to perform a spinal puncture without pain and discomfort to the patient. I can recall the days when spinal puncture was an uncomfortable procedure. Today, by the aid of local anesthesia, little, if any, discomfort is experienced. The patient may feel the slight pin-prick of the hypodermic needle and perhaps a mild feeling of jar.

Spinal puncture may be performed in the home or at the hospital. It is preferably done at the hospital, where all the facilities for the various tests are available.

Harmless, Too You can recall that during the recent infantile paralysis epidemic it was advised that all suspected cases of paralysis be submitted to the spinal puncture. It was the only sure means of recognizing the disease in its early stages. The number of children who were subjected to this procedure was great. There were no mishaps or bad effects.

It is the universal testimony of friends of mine in the profession, men who have made hundreds of these punctures, that no harm results. One famous doctor wrote me as follows: "We have never had any bad results from our spinal punctures and are anxious to extend the benefits of this diagnostic procedure to all in whom it is plainly indicated."

No one will deny that the success of modern medicine is due to the increasing and accurate knowledge of the causes of disease. It is when the cause is not known that the outlook is unfavorable. The use of the laboratory tests, such as the blood count, the Wasserman test, spinal puncture and the X-ray examination, enables the modern physician to detect and prevent diseases that would prove fatal if unrecognized.

If your physician advises a spinal puncture do not hesitate to take advantage of this modern method of diagnosis. Do not fear the test and above all else forget the false stories that have been circulated about it. It isn't as disagreeable as having a tooth extracted and certainly is no more dangerous.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE

by WARWICK DEEPING

CHAPTER FORTY

"I've settled it."

He threw his hat down on the oak table, laughing a little because there seemed so much zest, and contention, and joy in life. There was no need for him to tell her more. Jess' eyes glimmered as she held back the curtain.

"Come and tell Mother. We are so busy in here."

Mrs. Mascall glanced round at him with her glowing, busy face.

When Wolfe glanced at his watch and found that it was time to go, Jess woke up out of a secret reverie and looked at him with shining eyes. She went with John Wolfe across the paddock as far as the white gate.

"You don't know how glad I am."

Her pride was veiled in a half-mysterious shyness.

For the next three days the little coach-house at the back of Mrs. Loosely's house was the scene of Wolfe's labors. He had ordered in several hundred feet of deal boards and battens from a local builder, and borrowed a bag of tools from Adam Grinch. Two packing cases served as a carpenter's bench, and the green doors of the coach-house, propped open with bricks, showed Wolfe in his short sleeves busy knocking together a dresser and a set of standing shelves. They were to go in the back room or surgery where Wolfe had fixed up a slate sink, and a water cistern that could be filled by hand. Mr. Dendy's man, who was fixing Wolfe's brass plate on the front gate, was to come in and do the necessary plumbing.

Wolfe was pinning the mortices of his dresser when Mrs. Sarah Loosely crossed the yard. Her austere face wore a look of mild horror and her agitation showed itself in the way her crossed forearms clasped her bosom.

"Dr. Wolfe—Dr. Wolfe—"

She had to hail him through the blows of the mallet on the mortice pins.

"Dr. Wolfe—"

Wolfe turned mallet in hand. Mrs. Loosely had been showing wonderful patience in allowing him to hurl all manner of innovations in her quiet corner of life.

"Hallo! What is it, Mrs. Loosely?"

"It's the boys. I can't put up with it, sir, the racket, they are making outside my gate."

"Why, what about—"

"Your brass plate, I think, sir. Dendy's man has just fixed it."

"I'll go and see."

He put on his coat, and going out by the yard gate, made his way round to the front of the house. Mr. Dendy's man had gone indoors to start work on the plumbing and bell hanging. There were half a dozen boys and youths in the middle of the road, though where they had obtained their supply of rotten plums from was a matter of conjecture. They were noisily exultant, taking pot-shots at John Wolfe's new plate whose yellow gloss was tarnished with spattered juice and skin.

Posed on the footpath with an air of authority, Wolfe saw Threadgold's surgery boy, not fat Sam Perkins, but a later importation with red hair, muddy eyes, and a mouth like a cut-throat. This boy's mouth was absolutely portentous. Half his face seemed swallowed up by a red chasm when he shouted or laughed. He had a basketful of bottles on one arm, and his professional pride was spending itself in applauding this desecration of a rival and upstart door-plate.

Wolfe was half-hidden by a laurel hedge, but he was forestalled in the routine of these youngsters by the unexpected appearance of a very serviceable partisan Jabez. Josiah Crabbe's bow legged lad, came round the corner, summed up the situation, and charged home with an indiscriminate cuffing of hard young heads. The rioters scattered like sparrows, but Threadgold's boy, mighty as to buttons and top hat, opened his huge mouth and cawed like an indignant bird.

"Who's yer 'tting of? You shut."

He was charged into abruptly by Jabez's shoulder, caught in the chest, and deposited with violence upon the cobbles. There was a great smashing of glass. Dr. Threadgold's tinctures and infusions oozed over the stones.

The red-headed boy arose and retaliated, but he was no match for Jabez of the bullet head and the broad, hollow chest. One nostril showed a red streak, and the huge mouth seemed to bruise like an over-ripe love-apple. He subsided once more, and blubbered.

Wolfe strolled up, his hands in his pockets.

"I'm much obliged to you, Jabez."

The lad grinned.

"Dirty town kids; don't belong to Peachy Hill. I'll clean your plate, sir."

"Thanks, Jabez. I see you know how to hit."

Threadgold's boy had picked up his basket, and slouched off with a dirty handkerchief stuffed half inside his mouth. And in less than an hour Dr. Threadgold had heard of the encounter, the red-headed boy waggling a loose front tooth with the end of a forefinger, and showing the broken bottles.

"I weren't doin' nothin', sir. Just"

watching some boys pelting that there Mr. Wolfe's brass plate."

Threadgold sneited the air, like an old spaniel.

"Hey? What brass plate?" Dr. Threadgold asked his excited bottle boy.

"Up on Peachy Hill, sir. They do say as Mr. Wolfe 'as set up there."

This was the first warning that Dr. Threadgold had received. He took off his glasses and polished them and pattered off to tell his wife.

"An extraordinary piece of news, my dear!"

"What is it, Montague?"

"Wolfe has put up his plate on Peachy Hill."

It was a scandalous affair, against all etiquette, and gentlemanly feeling. Mrs. Threadgold possessed phlegm. She managed to lock no more disturbed than if she had heard that Wolfe had hanged himself.

"Preposterous? That won't last long, Montague. No decent people would ever countenance such conduct."

Dr. Threadgold fussed to and fro, trying to feel contemptuous and not succeeding.

"But, my dear—it may be a little awkward. Still—"

"Your position in the town is unassailable."

"Of course, of course. It is not that—"

"You ought to have had an agreement, and a clause in it—"

"Yes, yes, but who would have thought of it?"

Who would?

Wolfe had dined at Josiah Crabbe's, sitting at the round table Malabar oak and meeting the melancholy yet aggressive eyes of Samuel Boxall, editor of the "Wilmington Clarion." Boxall was but a modern rendering of a type that is as old as the dogmatic religions. Lean, red headed, and bristling with tawny eyes and an acid mouth hidden by wiry hair, he was on edge with discontent. A kind of hungry melancholy seemed to possess the man. He had a starved look and chewed savagely at his words when he was excited. His voice had three distinct levels of expression. He could snarl, whine sentimentally over the woes of the world, or be unctuously, even sordidly, practical.

"The happiness of the great majority, Mr. Crabbe, sir. No more hungry fortes, no more tyranny, no more Tory greed. With the Bible in our hand, sir, we must carry on the flag."

He was in his demagogic mood, darting rapid and half aggressive glances at Wolfe, and swaying backwards and forwards in his chair Wolfe noticed that the man's masticatory muscles were wonderfully well developed.

"We must stand for cleanliness, and justice between man and man. These privileged classes! Are they to be compared with the honest artisan?"

Josiah Crabbe had a most disconcerting eye. There was a sly and devilish sincerity about its twinkle that often brought verbose people into discomfited subjection.

Wolfe was half-hidden by a laurel hedge, but he was forestalled in the routine of these youngsters by the unexpected appearance of a very serviceable partisan Jabez. Josiah Crabbe's bow legged lad, came round the corner, summed up the situation, and charged home with an indiscriminate cuffing of hard young heads. "Libel; that's your great bug-bear, Boxall, eh?"

"We must dare, sir. We must not flinch from denouncing the poison in the pot—"

"Damages! Don't you forget 'em. The proprietors of the paper want their profits."

Boxall's yellow eyes glimmered at Josiah Crabbe. He appeared to rearrange himself of a sudden. His voice changed, and became smoothly practical.

"Assuredly, Mr. Crabbe, I am but an instrument, a tool, a chisel—"

"And if the handle splits—eh?"

"I take you, sir. I take you. We have our limitations. But since you are the chief proprietor of 'The Clarion'—"

Josiah Crabbe chuckled. His eyes met Wolfe's, and a flicker of shrewd understanding passed between them. Neither of them liked this man with the red hair and the starved, aggressive face. He was a by-product, a purge, a concoction of the age, useful as a chologue or even as an irritant to raise a blister.

"Yes, yes, but who would have thought of it?"

Who would?

Wolfe had dined at Josiah Crabbe's, sitting at the round table Malabar oak and meeting the melancholy yet aggressive eyes of Samuel Boxall, editor of the "Wilmington Clarion." Boxall was but a modern rendering of a type that is as old as the dogmatic religions. Lean, red headed, and bristling with tawny eyes and an acid mouth hidden by wiry hair, he was on edge with discontent. A kind of hungry melancholy seemed to possess the man. He had a starved look and chewed savagely at his words when he was excited. His voice had three distinct levels of expression. He could snarl, whine sentimentally over the woes of the world, or be unctuously, even sordidly, practical.

"The happiness of the great majority, Mr. Crabbe, sir. No more hungry fortes, no more tyranny, no more Tory greed. With the Bible in our hand, sir, we must carry on the flag."

He was in his demagogic mood, darting rapid and half aggressive glances at Wolfe, and swaying backwards and forwards in his chair Wolfe noticed that the man's masticatory muscles were wonderfully well developed.

"We must stand for cleanliness, and justice between man and man. These privileged classes! Are they to be compared with the honest artisan?"

Josiah Crabbe had a most disconcerting eye. There was a sly and devilish sincerity about its twinkle that often brought verbose people into discomfited subjection.

Wolfe was half-hidden by a laurel hedge, but he was forestalled in the routine of these youngsters by the unexpected appearance of a very serviceable partisan Jabez. Josiah Crabbe's bow legged lad, came round the corner, summed up the situation, and charged home with an indiscriminate cuffing of hard young heads. The rioters scattered like sparrows, but Threadgold's boy, mighty as to buttons and top hat, opened his huge mouth and cawed like an indignant bird.

"Who's yer 'tting of? You shut."

He was charged into abruptly by Jabez's shoulder, caught in the chest, and deposited with violence upon the cobbles. There was a great smashing of glass. Dr. Threadgold's tinctures and infusions oozed over the stones.

The red-headed boy arose and retaliated, but he was no match for Jabez of the bullet head and the broad, hollow chest. One nostril showed a red streak, and the huge mouth seemed to bruise like an over-ripe love-apple. He subsided once more, and blubbered.

Wolfe strolled up, his hands in his pockets.

"I'm much obliged to you, Jabez."

The lad grinned.

"Dirty town kids; don't belong to Peachy Hill. I'll clean your plate, sir."

"Thanks, Jabez. I see you know how to hit."

Threadgold's boy had picked up his basket, and slouched off with a dirty handkerchief stuffed half inside his mouth. And in less than an hour Dr. Threadgold had heard of the encounter, the red-headed boy waggling a loose front tooth with the end of a forefinger, and showing the broken bottles.

"I weren't doin' nothin', sir. Just"

watching some boys pelting that there Mr. Wolfe's brass plate."

Threadgold sneited the air, like an old spaniel.

"Hey? What brass plate?" Dr. Threadgold asked his excited bottle boy.

"Up on Peachy Hill, sir. They do say as Mr. Wolfe 'as set up there."

Threadgold sneited the air, like an old spaniel.

"Hey? What brass plate?" Dr. Threadgold asked his excited bottle boy.

"Up on Peachy Hill, sir. They do say as Mr. Wolfe 'as set up there."

This was the first warning that Dr. Threadgold had received. He took off his glasses and polished them and pattered off to tell his wife.

"An extraordinary piece of news, my dear!"

"What is it, Montague?"

"Wolfe has put up his plate on Peachy Hill."

It was a scandalous affair, against all etiquette, and gentlemanly feeling. Mrs. Threadgold possessed phlegm. She managed to lock no more disturbed than if she had heard that Wolfe had hanged himself.

"Preposterous? That won't last long, Montague. No decent people would ever countenance such conduct."

Dr. Threadgold fussed to and fro, trying to feel contemptuous and not succeeding.

"But, my dear—it may be a little awkward. Still—"

"Your position in the town is unassailable."

"Of course, of course. It is not that—"

"You ought to have had an agreement, and a clause in it—"

"Yes, yes, but who would have thought of it?"

worthy institutions must be maintained." R. S. McCulloch—"Our message here tonight is 'carry on'—that, in brief, is the spirit of this year's campaign."

F. P. Mullins—"There is a new spirit of hope and optimism today. A new psychology has been born. Trade lines for the first time in many months have crossed. We can safely believe the depression has been broken and I feel, we also can safely mortgage the future for a cause so worthy as the Community Chest."

F. Troy Cope—"Salem has always taken care of its own and it will now. It is a proud community with a commendable pride in its

HITLER SPEAKS
A CUT IN TAXES
PUBLIC WORK

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1933 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HITLER through the ether, has told the world what he and Germany want. He indorses what President Roosevelt says about peace, wants to see all nations reconciled "but only on a basis of equality." Those are the last words of his speech.

He warns other countries that "red chaos" would follow the outbreak of war in Europe and warns the allies, especially France, that Germany would fight any attempt to "impose sanctions" which would mean again marching troops into German territory.

He says "no new European war could possibly better in any way the unsatisfactory conditions of today." If Hitler means that, and if other European nations have common sense, there will be no war for the present.

YESTERDAY the Florida senate passed a resolution for a constitutional amendment exempting homesteads from all taxation up to $5,000. The amendment goes to the people of Florida at the next general election. Rep. Dwight L. Rogers sponsored the resolution, now passed by both houses. Congratulations to Florida.

Graveyards are tax exempt, churches and dozens of other institutions are tax exempt, as they should be.

If the Founder of Christianity should return, would He not demand first of all freedom from taxation for the homes in which poor people rear and train their children.

ENGLAND reads in President Roosevelt's message the threat of "preventive war held over European nations by the United States in case one nation should unjustifiably attack another."

Our British friends also, naturally, assume that if some European nation should attack another, President Roosevelt would have the United States apply "preventive war," sending more American men and millions of dollars to attend to the situation.

President Roosevelt will explain that this is not his plan.

A BILL to spend $3,300,000,000 on public works to help unemployment is sent to congress by President Roosevelt.

How will that money be raised? Will financiers be implored to lend it to Uncle Sam at high interest rates? Or will the government pay for the work with its new money?

Why not pay for the work with new dollars and retire them as these "self-liquidating" public works supply the cash?

This country is off the gold basis, why not get off the nonsense basis of going through the motions of borrowing and paying interest?

Some will call that "financial heresy," but what of it?

Holdup Man Leaves Roses With Victim
CHICAGO, May 18.—It turns out that a big bouquet of red roses is not much of an asset to a holdup man.

He stood with them in his hand as he rang the bell at the home of Mrs. Frederick M. Just.

She accepted the flowers, but screamed when her bearer drew a pistol and announced that "this is a stickup."

He fled leaving the flowers. "With compliments" read a card on the bouquet.

Friday Night

A QUIET, unassuming chap quick as a flash, packing a dangerous punch and who, in more than 100 amateur and professional bouts, has never felt the canvas with his back—that's Carmen Barth, Cleveland's 20-year-old world amateur middleweight champion who fights here Friday night.

Barth, whose reputation as a battler is known in all sections of the United States, makes a personal appearance at the Memorial building in a boxing and wrestling show sponsored by the American Legion. He risks his all, his entire past record in the fight game, in a 10-round battle with Ray Lyle, hard-punching Barborton scrapper.

Barth's ring record shows him having appeared in New York, City, New Orleans, Chicago, California and other sections of the country. He was the star member of the amateur fight team of the Robins Athletic club in Cleveland, operated by the popular Manny Robins, turning professional but a few months ago after having climaxed a great amateur career by winning his world championship in 1932 Olympic games at Los Angeles.

THE AVERAGE fan little realizes the importance of this international crown won by Barth. They fail to realize that more than 30 nations of the world sent amateur fighters to America to compete for Olympic titles. They do not realize that out of more than 12 championships awarded in boxing during the Olympics, the United States carried off but one title.

Fans are not generally aware that a battler must be outstanding in fact the best in the country in his class, to even compete in the Olympics. Before he was granted this right Barth had to complete a schedule for the regional amateur championships in Cleveland, New York, Chicago and vanquish the leading middleweights Uncle Sam had to offer.

So much for Carmen's amateur record—it doesn't count for a snap in the pro racket. He'll find this out when he backs up against Lyle in the Legion's show and a classy, thrilling battle, with a probable knockout, should be the result.

RATIN FINALLY abated and left Class A and church league softball activities proceed. Numerous contests in both circuits have been postponed and will be replayed. A schedule for the replayed games will be drafted by the board of arbitration soon.

Take your pick from the field of ten teams; your guess is as good as the next guy for the fight is on at its best. It's probably the best circuit in history and it wouldn't surprise fans much if the first round title battle would end in a deadlock between at least three teams.

That's how closely matched the entries are.

Observations at softball games: Ted Scott's head and shoulders better than any other first-sacker in the city. Wayne Russell's gonna prove hard to beat and so is Dale Ritchie. Mullins is still the luckiest team in the city. Cecil Scullion's as fat and Pat Boen's as noisy as ever.

Safety Director John Kerr says he's going to try his hand at the game. . . . used to be a great first-sacker. . . . Wayne Slinger's catch against the Chiefs was the best of the year. . . . watch out for the Schafer Billiards. . . . George Morris has a new ball glove.

ASSUMING that Max Baer beats Max Schmeling in their bout at New York next month and assuming that he should go on to beat the winner of the Jack Sharkey-Primo Carnera title fight, the Jewish heavyweight would still be just a fighter. He laughs off any ideas of high-brow notions.

"Fighting is my game," he says. "I read, but my reading is confined to newspapers and the fan mail which comes to my camp. I don't go in for books or anything fancy."

Baer admits to having taken up singing but says he quit it because it was a bore. He said he only started singing lessons because someone told him it was good for the wind. Roadwork is better, he thinks.

Baer does go in for golf. He scores fairly well but only because he drives so far. His approach is fair, so he often gets well home in par figures, but his putting is wretched.

INCIDENTALLY he does get an enormous amount of fan mail. Scores of letters are contained in each of the two deliveries at his Atlantic City camp. Most of the letters are from youngsters seeking advice for training and conditioning. There's an occasional match note. Most of the writers ask for autographed pictures.

Baer's Atlantic City camp is plain as an old shoe. He lives in a simple cottage at the Bader aviation field. Except for his training activities most of the excitement there is to be had at the fire station adjoining the field. Baer eats everything and lots of it. He has no pet dishes such as those made for Schmeling, and his chest woe at the dinner table is to get enough food. Nothing scientific about his diet. Just good, plain food.

COPE GIVEN JOB WITH GOODYEAR

Salem High Graduate, Star at Mt. Union, Awarded Akron Post

Robert Cope of Salem, one of the most versatile athletes in Mount Union college history, will be employed by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., at Akron, following his graduation early in June.

Church League Results

Concord Presbyterians may have to step into the Class A league to get any opposition in softball for they certainly appear to strong for anything the local church league has to offer.

The Concord team handed the Holy Trinity Lutherans a 6-1 setback for its third straight victory Wednesday.

St. Paul's Columbians looked strong in unsetting the First Presbyterians, 16-5.

Wittenberg Upsets
Cedarville Squad
SPRINGFIELD, May 18—In a 14-inning baseball game that was hardly more than a pitching duel, Wittenberg defeated Cedarville college, 2 to 1.

Roy James of Wittenberg struck out 20 men, and Preston Garlough of Cedarville 18.

Washington Advances To Second Place; Yanks

Washington and Cleveland American league clubs returned to orthodox baseball Wednesday after their wild exhibition of the day before with the Senators handing the Indians a 3-2 upset.

Alvin Crowder, one of the league's greatest slappers, outpitched the Cleveland ace Wesley Ferrell, to gain the verdict.

The battle for second place between two rivals is providing the excitement in the American league with the Senators advancing into the coveted position by their win yesterday. The tribe, however, rests but a few points behind with the Yankees still in first place.

White Sox Beat A's
Just a few points behind the Indians, however, are the White Sox, continuing their surprise showing yesterday by upsetting the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-2. Al Simmons was the star.

The Brooklyn Dodgers have found the going rather rough in the National league campaign, particularly when everybody was getting good pitching and their batters weren't able to hit their stride, but with the clouting department coming into its own again they are showing signs of becoming a serious threat.

In three games, the Dodgers have risen from a rather weak fifth in the standing to third place. All three victories were won with "story book" ninth inning rallies of the most exciting order. Yesterday they put over three runs in a last frame rally for a 5-2 triumph over St. Louis that moved them into third place and showed the Cardinals into a tie for fourth with Cincinnati.

Heimach Injured
The only painful part of the victory was that Freddy Heimach, starting hurler, sprained an ankle when his spikes caught on the slab in the fifth inning.

Cincinnati, which had been as high as third place, dropped back to a tie with the Cards when Ed Brandt pitched the Boston Braves to an 8-0 victory. He gave the Reds only three hits while the Braves blasted out 13.

Pittsburgh improved its hold on the top by winning its third straight from the Phillies, 6 to 4. The second place Giants and the Chicago Cubs were idle, preparing for a doubleheader today when the Cubs plan to host the 1932 pennant.

Dale Alexander starred as the Red Sox whipped the Browns, 7-3.

SPRING FEVER

may not put you in bed

...but if you feel listless, tired, run-down, appetite dull, with a weak let-down feeling—perhaps nervous and worn out—why not "snap out" of this condition? Tune up your appetite, increase those red-blood-cells, and get in step with those who put zip and pep into everything they do—the best way to be happy and cheerful.

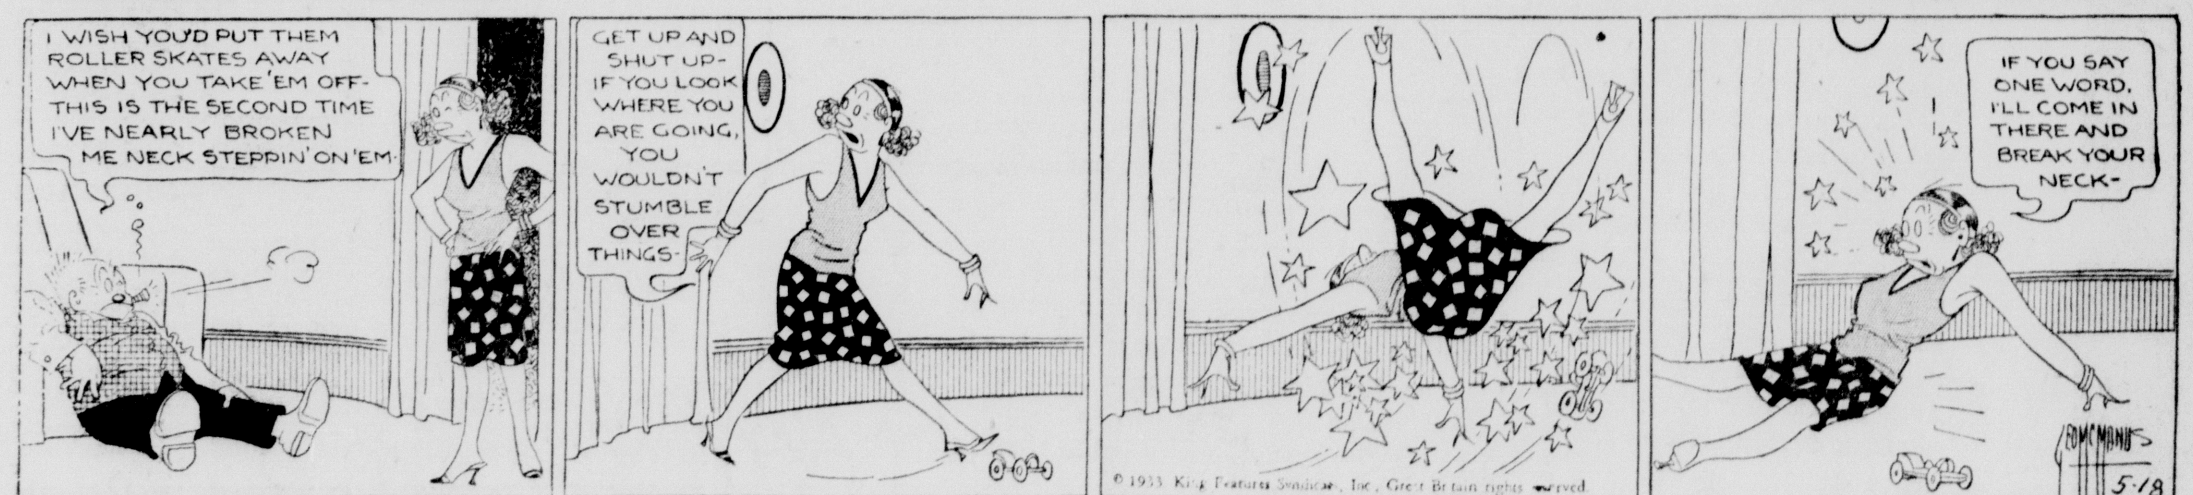

There is a good old medicine, S.S.S.—tested both by time and by scientific research, which in addition to being a valuable general tonic, has been found to be remarkably efficient in restoring to the blood the normal amount of red-blood-cells and their hemoglobin. ...if you suspect an organic disease, consult a physician. S.S.S. is not a "cure-all" BUT for a plump skin and that tired, worn-out, let-down feeling—"spring fever" just try S.S.S. and see how you awake after a night's sound sleep feeling fresh and fine, —and see how you eat with restored appetite... see how your skin clears up.

Instead of slowing down in the early afternoon, you should possess ample energy to carry on thru the day and evening hours. S.S.S. is a particularly valuable tonic in the Spring of the year. It is liquid of course... never sold in tablet form.
...as a word of caution to the millions who know S.S.S. and its benefits from personal experiences, we suggest that you do not permit anyone to switch you to any of the hundreds of "just as good as S.S.S." substitutes. Remember that successful products are always imitated, but it seldom pays to buy imitations.—insist upon S.S.S. At all good drug stores.

Radio Star, Arliss Film at State Friday and Saturday

THERE has been a change of program at the State theater for Friday and Saturday. It is a good change for it brings to the screen the most popular aristocrat and gentleman of the screen—George Arliss in his latest release, "The Working Man." This is in addition, of course, to the personal appearance of Pie Plant Pete, Cleveland hill-billy radio artist.

Heard From Cleveland
The radio singer has been heard over WTAM, Cleveland, at 6:05 p. m. for the past year. He will have his harmonica and mouth organ and will sing popular mountain songs.

Arliss, beloved by all movie-goers, should have a most popular role in this film. Somewhat similar to the one he played in "The Millionaire" the star appears as a short-tempered, soft hearted champion of "big business" who steals time from his own affairs to straighten out the lives of the orphaned children of his former strongest competitor.

It is a spiced comedy drama of American business and youthful folly. It is timely and should appeal to everyone.

Bette Davis in Cast
Bette Davis, who played with Arliss in "The Man Who Played God" is again cast in a prominent role.

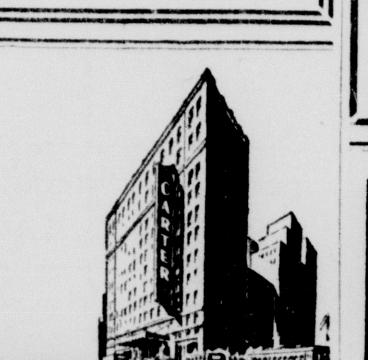

Hardie Albright, said by no less an authority than Arliss himself to be one of the most gifted of Hollywood's younger stars, plays the role of a rather conceited young man who tries to run the "business" while the star goes on his long wanted fishing trip.

TODAY brings to a close the double bill at the State—John Barrymore in "Topaze" and "The Cohens and Kellys in Trouble."

"Topaze" Clever Story
"Topaze" recommends itself on many counts but the most outstanding are that it stars John Barrymore and that it is a very smooth and brilliant version of the play that was such a great success in Paris and New York. Then again, it is comedy. . . . Brittle, fresh, and utterly nonsensical comedy—a thing that the youngest of the Royal Family does so splendidly.

and yet so seldom. The story tells how Prof. Auguste Topaze, innocent, naive and of simple soul is suddenly transplanted from his classroom to the excitement of the drawing room and social circles.

The climax finds our hero outwitting the soundrels that at first tried to capitalize on his simplicity and honesty which they took for idiocy.

Myrna Loy does well with an important part and the cast includes Luis Alberni, Jackie Searl, Reginald Mason and Jobyna Howland.

Cohen, Kelly Comedy
George Sidney and Charlie Murray make this their seventh comedy together and it is one of their funniest. Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Albertson, Maude Fulton, Jobyna Howland, Andy Devine and Henry Armetta are others that make up one of the very best of comedy casts.

This time Cohen and Kelly go to sea and, with their usual troubles and more to boot, the film is one laugh after another.

Henry Ford Dearborn, Mich.
May 15, 1933

Time and again I am told—by my own organization and by others—that I penalize myself by quality.

Friendly critics protest our putting into the Ford V-8 what they call "twenty-year steel." They say such quality is not necessary; the public does not expect it; and that the public does not know the difference anyway.

But I know the difference.

I know that the car a man sees is not the car he drives—he drives the car which the engineer sees. The car which is seen, comprises beauty of design, color and attractive accessories—all desirable, of course. The best evidence that we think so is that they are all found on the Ford V-8.

But these are not the car. The car proper, which is the basis of all the rest, is the type of engine and its reliability; the structure of chassis and body, ruggedly durable; the long thought and experiment given to safety factors; the steady development of comfort, convenience and economy. These make the car.

A car can be built that will last two or three years. But we have never built one. We want the basic material of our car to be as dependable the day it is discarded as the day it is bought. Ford cars built 15 years ago are still on the road. It costs more to build a durable car—but two items we do not skimp are cost and conscience. A great many things could "get by"—the public would never know the difference. But we would know.

The new Ford V-8 is a car that I endorse without any hesitancy. I know what is in it. I trust our whole thirty years' reputation with it. It is even better than our previous V-8. It is larger, more rugged and mechanically a better job all round.

I readily say this in an advertisement because I know the car will back it up.

Henry Ford
